

Hughes Loses
$135 Million Suit

NEW YORK (AP) — Elusive Howard Hughes lost a $135-million law suit Thursday because he refused to emerge from seclusion long enough to fight it. A federal judge ordered a special hearing to fix actual damages.

However, lawyers for the multi-millionaire industrialist had anticipated the decision nearly three months ago, and deliberately provoked it in order to get the case before federal appeals courts on a particular point of law.

District Court Judge Charles M. Metzger told attorneys in the case, "I will later hand down a decision in which I will make a finding of willful and deliberate default in this case. I am going to direct a default judgment. The only thing left is, how much."

Kennedy Honors
Medal Heroes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's outstanding battlefield heroes, the men who wear the Medal of Honor, gathered with President Kennedy on Thursday and heard him tell them they represent the determination of Americans to defend their country.

The recipients of the highest award the United States can give for military valor assembled for a moving ceremony in the White House rose garden, aflame with the colors of spring.

Scranton Denies
Patronage Block

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Scranton denied Thursday night reports that he has closed the patronage doors across the state in order to gain legislative support for increased taxes.

Reports reaching Harrisburg said Scranton had ordered all patronage held up until the legislature enacts a tax program providing him with the $139 million he says he needs to balance the budget.

When asked for comment, the governor said:

"This is certainly not true. In fact, I was talking with Ray (personnel secretary Ray Bollinger) about it today and he told me he had moved several jobs, including some in counties where representatives have voted against the tax program."

State Revenues
Top April Goal

HARRISBURG (AP) — April general fund revenues were $4.7 million above estimates, the governor's office reported Thursday.

It reduced the difference between estimates and actual receipts for the 10 months of the 1962-63 fiscal year to $5.5 million.

However, Gov. Scranton said his budget office still is holding to the estimate that revenues will be some $20 million under estimates when the fiscal year ends June 30.

The estimated shortage is the basis for a $22 million deficit when the books are closed on the current budget.

Marchers Pass
Threat Of Jail

TRENTON, Ga. (AP) — Curious townspeople watched silently Thursday as a group of "freedom marchers" filed by on their way to Alabama where officials have said jail cells are waiting.

About 100 spectators, mostly white, gathered in the square of this little northwest Georgia town as the 10 marchers passed through. Sheriff Allison Blevins stood among the spectators, who made no demonstration of feeling.

Planes Collide
In Catskills

KINGSTON, N.Y. (AP) — Two F106 jet fighters, flown by the manufacturer's test pilots, collided over the Catskill Mountains Thursday, killing at least one of the fliers.

Witnesses saw three parachutes descending, but two hours of search turned up no survivor.

Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Investment demand for an assortment of blue chips pushed the stock market to another of its series of 1963 highs Thursday, but activity was beginning to drag.

Volume dipped to 4.48 million shares from Wednesday's 5.04 million, a sign that trading was mainly in the hands of professionals and institutions and that the "public" was still not participating on a broad scale.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 1.42 to 721.06, a high for the year.

Eastburg Residents
Attacked In Georgia

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) — A middle-aged Pennsylvania couple was beaten and robbed Thursday at a roadside park 10 miles south of Brunswick by two white youths whose trail led to Waycross, Ga., three hours later.

A massive search was launched by various law enforcement agencies while treatment was given at the Brunswick Hospital to the victims, Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Everett, of 438 North Courtland Street East, Stroudsburg, Pa.

Everett, 62, was taken into surgery for repair of cuts and possible fractures from a beating with a shotgun. His wife, Mae, 58, was admitted for treatment of apparently minor abrasions and bruises.

Their attackers robbed the couple of $300 after beating them with the shotgun. One drove off in the couple's 1959 car. The other man drove away in an old model convertible, Glynn County police said.

The couple had stopped at the roadside park on U. S. 17 to get water when they were beaten and robbed.

Sighting of the Everetts car was reported later in Waycross, causing the search to be pressed there.

The elder Everett and his son, Russell, operate a coal business at the N. Courtland St. address. There are two other sons, Chester, also of N. Courtland St., and Richard, living in Florida. The Everetts have a daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Staples, who also lives in East Stroudsburg.

Chester Everett said last night that his parents left Wednesday morning for a Florida vacation. The family had not been notified of the beating.

Gradner Promises
Horse Race Ethics

HARRISBURG (AP) — Ralph Gradner, the new executive secretary of the state Harness Racing Commission, knows of only one way to run the sport in Pennsylvania: "Keep it as clean as possible."

That basic formula for success was reiterated time and again in an interview to learn his philosophies about a sport with which, he admittedly has little practical experience.

"I have no racing background," he said. "This is my difficulty to be able to assimilate all this information as clearly and as quickly as I can."

"I was brought in here for security. It's my job to keep the tracks as clean as we can."

Gradner left the state police force with the rank of major after 38 years of service to take the $15,000-a-year job with the commission.

As a state police major, he was making about $10,000 a year. But the salary had nothing to do with the change.

He'll be 60 years old June 8.

Law requires a state policeman to leave the force at age 60.

It was chiefly because of Gradner's state police background that he got the job with the commission.

As Harry Rosal, general counsel for the commission, put it:

"A number of individuals spoke on Major Gradner's behalf. The commission feels it should take advantage of his administrative and security background."

"I'm not a politician," says Gradner. (He's been registered as a non-partisan since he was 21.)

"In security, I don't want anybody to give me pressure because of politics. When a decision has to be made, I want my decision to be made with a clear conscience."

"As a Pennsylvania state policeman, I felt I could best serve the public by not having any political affiliation which might reflect on any action of mine."

"The same applies here. If the day comes when I see I can't act according to my ideals — and I don't foresee that day now — then I don't think I'll be here."

Romney Still Denies
Interest In '64 Bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. George Romney of Michigan tried to quash rumors Thursday by repeating a refrain. "I am not a candidate for president. I am not going to become one," he said again and again.

The rumors were sparked by a story in the New York Times that friends would quietly put him forward at a private party Thursday as the potential Republican candidate in 1964.

Romney, bombarded with queries from newsmen, called a news conference to deny the story.

"I want to keep a purely private affair from turning into something it isn't intended to be," Romney said.

The news conference, attended by 50 newsmen, followed the traditional ritual of news conferences held by men considered possible candidates for presidential nomination.

Same Routine

Almost every question was a variation on the same theme—will you be a candidate? Most every answer was a variation on the same response—no.

At one point, Romney was asked if he would "take the final test of a man who doesn't want to become president and give a Gen. Sherman-type statement."

In 1864, Gen. William T. Sherman, a Civil War hero, said, when boomed for the Republican nomination: "If nominated, I will not accept; if elected, I will not serve."

Romney, however, did not go that far. "I am not a candidate for president," he repeated. "I am not going to become one."

"I don't care what the timing is, six months from now or nine months from now, I will say the same thing," he added.

Asked what he thought of what a reporter called efforts by former President Dwight D. Eisenhower and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon to push him for the presidency, Romney replied: "If they're doing that, it's not something I'm aware of. I haven't had any contact with Gen. Eisenhower or Mr. Nixon for months."

Churchill Retirement Felt
Deeply By British People

LONDON (AP) — In Parliament, in business offices and in the streets, Britons sadly reflected Thursday on Sir Winston Churchill's decision to retire from the House of Commons.

Described as fit, Sir Winston, 83, sat in his London home receiving telegrams from all over the world. Among them was a message from the White House.

On the village green in the London suburb of Woodford, represented by the great wartime leader in Parliament, there is a statue of Sir Winston.

People paused and looked up at the statue. Some took off their hats.

"This is a great loss," said bank clerk Harold Jameson, 42. "I voted for him always. He will always have a very special place in Woodford even though he retires."

Said Ralph Bennett, 50, an insurance man: "His memory will live as long as that statue."

Ethel Harp, 60: "Although I'm sorry to see him go I think it's time he looked after himself. We won't get anyone like him again. He's a wonderful man and I've always voted for him."

Blaming an accident last year when he fell and broke his hip, Sir Winston Wednesday told his constituents in Woodford that he would not run again for Parliament.

He said it was difficult for him to get around.

With the Liberals showing increasing strength in Britain, a Liberal candidate—as well as a Laborite — would probably have opposed Sir Winston at the next general election, which must be held by October 1964.

In the last election, Sir Winston's majority was more than 14,000, but this was in a straight fight with Labor.

Politicians agree it is conceivable that a Churchill who could not get out and campaign might have been hard pressed in a three-party election.

Ministers of Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's Cabinet agreed informally that something special must be done to impress upon Sir Winston the respect in which he's held by all parties.

In the House of Commons, Harold Wilson, Labor party leader, said all parties understood with deep sympathy the reasons for Churchill's decision but they had the decision of our oldest parliamentarian and father of the House to make the announcement he did yesterday."

Nixon Plans
N. Y. State
Residence

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon said Thursday he is changing his residence from California to New York City and joining a New York law firm June 1.

The move raised immediate speculation as to whether he would embark on a renewed political career here eventually although he has disavowed any such intention.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, generally regarded as having an eye on a possible move from Albany to the White House, said he was very happy to welcome Nixon to New York and expressed hope he would become active in politics.

"He is a distinguished American," Rockefeller told newsmen on his way to a luncheon. "I hope Dick Nixon will become active in New York politics."

Americans Conquer
Mt. Everest's Peak

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — They made it!

Two Americans have carried the Stars and Stripes to the summit of Mt. Everest, the world's highest mountain, more than five miles above sea level.

Messages reaching Katmandu Thursday night said the pair, climbing to jet-plane heights, reached the top at nighttime May Day, Wednesday, right on schedule.

The identity of the two Americans was not announced pending the return of other teams of the American expedition headed by Norman G. Dyhrenfurth, 44, of Santa Monica, Calif.

Radio messages from the base camp gave only the barest details, saying the assault was successful.

First Americans

The first successful American assault came 10 years after New Zealand's Sir Edmund Hillary became the first to reach the summit. He and the native mountaineer Tensing Norgay stumbled to the top May 28, 1953.

Mt. Everest, 29,028 feet high, towers over the mystic Himalayas which straddle the border of Nepal and Tibet. Temperatures at the peak hit 50 below zero. It is encrusted with ice and snow.

A dozen men have perished in attempt to conquer Everest. One of them was a member of this expedition.

Two Swiss teams reached the top in 1956. Red China reported an expedition of its own climbed the peak May 25, 1960, but international mountaineering circles have refused to accept this for lack of substantiating evidence.

Started In February

The American team left Katmandu Feb. 29 with 19 American climbers and scientists and 800 porters carrying 54,500 pounds of food and supplies.

The expedition reached an assault position at 27,800 feet Tuesday.

Two assault teams set out for the summit and a third followed in support, rigging lines for the descent.

It was the 15th full-scale expedition to Everest, and probably the most elaborate. The backers, chiefly the National Geographic Society of Washington, D.C., poured $400,000 into it.

The expedition's aim was much more than climbing the world's highest mountain.

A sociologist, medical scientists and a clinical psychologist went along to study man's reactions at such heights.

At altitudes of four to five miles men's minds and bodies undergo heavy physical punishment. It is an effort even to talk or think.

The air is thin, the winds are fierce and cold, and the footing treacherous.

With radioscopes, Dr. William Sirt, 41, of Richmond, Calif., studied the effects of the stresses on the climbers and the effects on the heart beat.

The psychologist, Dr. James T. Lester Jr., 34, of Berkeley, Calif., kept a day-by-day record of any psychological changes in the men.

Dr. Richard M. Emerson, 37, of Cincinnati, Ohio, carried a tape recorder to preserve the conversations of the climbers to be analyzed later.

Of the 19 members of the expedition, three are medical doctors and five hold Ph.Ds.

The team was selected from more than 150 candidates on the basis of their ability to act as a team. They practiced for two weeks climbing Mt. Rainier in Washington State last fall.

A radio blackout Wednesday held up word of the successful assault.

Scranton Sees Return
Of Economic Growth

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Scranton said Thursday Pennsylvania's economic growth during the next fiscal year is expected to be better than it has been since the Korean War.

"There are some expectations that Pennsylvania will begin to get back to the type of growth features we had before the 30's," the chief executive told his weekly news conference.

He referred to the depression years between 1930 and 1940.

"It looks better for the coming fiscal year," he said, adding: "Next year the growth rate looks better than in the past 10 years."

The Korean War ended in the summer of 1953. During the war years the state's steel industry and other defense industries worked at a high capacity, contributing to generally good economic conditions.

Since the end of the war the state has been hit by cyclical recessions, especially in the basic coal and steel industries.

"We're not off to the races by any means," the governor cautioned. However, the tone of his remarks indicated optimism.

He also said the state's economic growth hinged largely on the national economic climate. The governor declined to pinpoint the possible percentage growth in the state economy.

Economic growth—or lack of it—is a key feature in the projection of state revenues.

The governor said he could not answer whether budget needs of the future would require further expansion of the state's taxes.

He said he would prefer expansion of the state's sales tax to other items, rather than boost the rate. His revenue recommendations called for increasing the state's 4 per cent sales tax to 4½ per cent and extending it to clothing.

The Republican lawmakers balked at that plan and indicated they would support a 5 per cent tax limited to the present base. Scranton said earlier in the week he would go along with that.

However, the governor indicated that the state ultimately will have to face up to taxes on clothing and food, if revenue demands keep increasing.

In other news conference developments:

Budget and Taxes—The current stalemate in the GOP House caucus on a tax program presently requires no interference by the administration, the governor indicated. Asked if he would personally put pressure on lawmakers holding out against a tax boost, the governor said:

Presidential Prospects — Asked to comment on a report that former President Dwight D. Eisenhower favors Michigan Governor George Romney as a Republican presidential candidate, Scranton said:

"Good for him."

Festival Decision Delayed

FINAL DECISION on the proposed Pocono Mountains International Musical Festival—scheduled for late June in Stroudsburg—will be made next week.

This was announced last night by representatives of the sponsoring organizations — Varsity S Association of Stroudsburg, Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau, Pocono Mountains Junior Chamber of Commerce and Stroudsburg Businessmen's Association.

The joint statement issued after a special meeting in the Penn-Stroud Hotel, Stroudsburg, said:

"No final decision on the music festival has been made. It is anticipated that an announcement will be made within the coming week."

Representatives of the Pocono Mountains Musical Festival are attempting to iron out final details for the three-day program which has been tentatively slated for June 28-29-30 at Gordon Giffels Field, Stroudsburg.

Officials Inspect Walk Light Site

STROUDSBURG and Pennsylvania Dept. of Highways officials, concerned about pedestrian safety at Fifth and Main Sts., inspected the intersection yesterday afternoon.

The Highways Dept. has recommended the installation of pedestrian-operated "walk" signals on Main St. on either side of Fifth to stop traffic while pedestrians cross.

At the present time, a green arrow directs traffic coming from Fifth St. and turning right onto Main to move even though traffic in other lanes is stopped. The green arrow would be eliminated under the department's proposal.

Harold E. Snyder, borough manager, said last night no final decision has been reached. The borough has filed a verbal application for a change in signals at the intersection, which is good for one year.

Snyder said the department will furnish specifications for the new lighting system after which the borough will ask prices for the change and then decide whether or not it is practical to make the change.

Snyder estimated at a Borough Council meeting Wednesday night that the change would cost about $500 to $1,000. The new system has been recommended by Maurice Berry, traffic engineer for District 5, with headquarters in Allentown.

Courthouse Basement Seen Costing $96,000 To Remodel

STROUDSBURG — John R. Lesoine, chairman of Monroe County board of commissioners said yesterday the cost of remodeling the basement of the county courthouse for Civil Defense headquarters has been estimated at $96,000.

Lesoine added that half the final cost will be refunded to the county by the federal government on a matching fund basis.

In addition to Lesoine, attending the Civil Defense discussion yesterday were Commissioners Willard L. Quick and Stanley B. Rader; President Judge Fred W. Davis; Marvin Abel, Monroe County civil defense director; Mrs. Catharine Miller, deputy Civil Defense administrator; and Harold Rinker of Rinker, Kiefer and Rake, architects of Stroudsburg.

Commissioner Quick said, "The total figure is not known at present and no final figures are available."

Rinker reported "This is only an estimated figure. The actual cost will not be known until bids for the job are opened. The cost can be higher or it can be lower."

Judge Davis inquired about shelves for storage and the type of lighting to be used in the various rooms when the remodeling is completed.

Lights Included

Commissioner Lesoine, after reading the specifications, told Judge Davis that fluorescent lights are included in the drawings and specifications.

In other business, H. R. A. Saunders, chief clerk of Monroe County Commissioners, reported new registration of eligible voters in Monroe County dropped from the September, 1962, totals.

New registration shows a total of 18,882 voters. This compares with 19,988 voters last fall.

A breakdown of the new registration shows there are 11,025 Democrats; 7,614 Republicans; 148 non-partisans; 94 independents; and one prohibitionist.

Last September there were 11,772 Democrats; 7,941 Republicans; 167 Non-partisans; 107 Independents, and one Prohibitionist.

Dr. Alfred Sumberg, president of Monroe County SPCA, asked the commissioners to place $1,582.68 in the county budget as a contribution to the proposed local SPCA budget of $8,500.

Commissioner Quick said that the county would donate $1,600.

Dr. Sumberg also told the commissioners there are an estimated 2,000 unlicensed dogs in Monroe County and 4,578 dogs in the county with licenses.

'Grazing' Deadline Nears

MONROE County farmers reminded yesterday that payments for diversion and the special price-support payments depends on not grazing acreage diverted under either the 1963 wheat or feed grain program from May 1 to November 1, 1963.

Donald Reish, chairman, Monroe County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, said that the acreage affected is the acreage designated for diversion by the program participant at the time a check is made of compliance.

It was announced the check in this country should be substantially completed by Aug. 1.

Under the wheat and feed grain programs, farmers seek to bring production into line with needs through diverting to a conserving use acreage formerly planted to either wheat or corn, grain sorghum, or barley. Program payments are made to offset the loss of income which otherwise might have been returned from such crop production.

Monroe has signed up 99 farms for participation in the 1963 wheat stabilization program and 190 farms in the 1963 feed grain program. Acreage signed up for diversion under the program included 636 acres from wheat production and 2017 acres from production of the three feed grains.

Federal Agencies Conflict

What is described as "a complete break" has occurred between the Federal Power Commission and the Department of the Interior over policy. A prime cause is a proposed control by Interior of the lines of private utility companies that cross Federal lands. This is particularly important in the western and mountain states, where Federal land ownership is greatest.

Interior's intent, it would seem, is to impose restrictions on the utilities with the purpose of harassing them, adding to the costs of providing service and thus advancing the cause of socialized power.

In any event, FPC Chairman Swidler, in a letter to Interior Secretary Udall, objects to these rights-of-way controls by Interior on the grounds that they "would attack the difficult and often controversial problem of transmission system planning and coordination through unilateral determination by one of the parties involved."

Further: "In our view, if the authority to pass upon and condition the construction of non-Federal transmission lines is to be exercised by an instrumentality of the Federal Government, the appropriate body to perform this task is the Federal Power Commission."

Mr. Swidler also praised the plans of a group of California utility companies to build a high voltage grid system connecting with the Pacific Northwest where, at present, there are abundant sources of power.

At least two points of major significance are at stake in this controversy. One is whether the Interior Department is to take over functions of the Federal Power Commission. Another is whether Interior in its zeal to promote federal power—to the exclusion not only of private utilities but public nonfederal producers and suppliers—is to be allowed to impose totally unreasonable controls which would artificially and needlessly add to consumer costs, and impair standards of service.

State's Double Standard

Pennsylvania's 14 state colleges are generally overcrowded and financially undernourished. But even over and above that, the thousands of students who attend these colleges and the thousands of families who help send them there have cause for real indignation.

We refer to the double standard Pennsylvania follows in financing college buildings.

Students living on campus at the 14 colleges pay the equivalent of $17 a week for room, board and laundry. Three dollars of this, by legislative decree, is to pay the amortization of new dormitories. Not only are the students paying for the buildings they use but for buildings that won't be ready until after they graduate.

The same kind of policy now is being designed for the financing of student centers. A bill authorizing a special $10-per-semester fee to pay for these buildings was approved this week by the House Education Committee.

Th money the students pay goes to the Department of Property and Supplies, which makes rental payments to the State's big borrow-and-build agency, the General State Authority. This year the special dormitory fees will amount to $1.8 million.

Then there's the second standard for financing college buildings. Pennsylvania applies it to the bloc of strictly private colleges, universities and specialized schools that get State money. In 1956 they, too, became eligible for GSA-financed buildings. Although the wording of the law was ambiguous, the understanding was that the colleges would meet the rental payments. But so far the State hasn't collected a cent from Penn, Pitt, Temple, Lincoln or any of the other private colleges that are getting these buildings.

Projects worth $94 million have been completed, or are in process at these schools. They include one dormitory and a whole bevy of academic buildings. The same schools have another $230 million in building projects on request for the next six years. The rental payments for these projects have only begun to mount. This year they'll be at $1.8 million, just about the same sum the state college students are paying for their own buildings.

Maybe a case can be made out for the taxpayers' picking up the tab for buildings at private colleges. But all the buildings?

Maybe students should help pay for dormitories at public colleges. But in advance of using them?

This is a situation that cries out for public spotlighting and for establishment of a policy that is both consistent and in the public interest.

Scranton's TV Technique

By Mason Denison

Harrisburg — Reporter's Notebook:

CAUGHT BY SURPRISE—Many around Capitol Hill were caught off base Wednesday night when Governor Scranton went on a statewide television and radio broadcast to present his "State of the Commonwealth" address.

Reason: most assumed the Governor would plunk vigorously and spiritedly on the boob tube for his own particular $13 million tax increase proposal involving upping the sales tax to 4½ and taxing clothing.

Instead, Mr. Scranton's main effort followed his original intent: centering around an explanation of need for the additional $139 million; the "why-fore" of the fiscal request—rather than "how" it should be done. . . . In fact the day before the telecast he told legislative leaders he was not wet irrevocably to the tax program his office had recommended—that he would go along with any "reasonable" program.

Another Inauguration—Pennsylvania Democrats weren't quite able to muster one from within their own ranks for the gubernatorial inaugural this year—but they're having an inauguration anyway on Tuesday, May 7.

This "second inauguration" of the year for Pennsylvania will see the formal seating of Miss Genevieve Blatt for a third term as Pennsylvania's Secretary of Internal Affairs, the only woman ever to be elected to the Internal Affairs post—in fact the first member of the distaff side ever to be elected to any statewide office. She won her third term last fall in a down-to-the-last-hair curler count that saw her barely nose out Republican aspirant Mrs. Audrey R. Kelly.

Wit Of The Week—A King of Prussia "Scranton supporter" dropped a note to the Governor this week and enclosed a brochure explaining a motor governor (a device to control engine speeds) he had invented. . . . Heading on the two-page brochure: "At Last A Governor That Really Works."

Penned to the brochure by the inventor was this note to Governor Scranton: "I thought the heading appropriate to the situation in Harrisburg since January 15" (Democrats: no panic—please.)

Speaking Of Letters . . . A check with the front office secretary shows somewhat amazingly that Governor Scranton—nearly four months after assuming office—is still receiving mail (addressed to his own personal gubernatorial nbs, that is) at a rate of between 800 and 900 letters a day!

In the memory of old hands around Capitol Hill the volume is by far and wide a record breaker and has literally snowed under the letter-opening-and-answering force. . . . Between 30 and 40 invitations are received daily covering speaking engagement requests. . . . An awful lot of letters to the Governor ask about jobs, possibility of state employment—but interestingly, a very high percentage of the letters simply involve an expression of feeling about a host of subjects pertaining to Pennsylvania, offering solutions, recommendations, or just plain comments.

Legislative Preference—Two lawmakers drove up to a parking space on Capitol Hill at the same time this week—each for a moment jockeying for "shoot in" position ahead of the other, trying to avoid denuding each car of its fenders.

Suddenly recognizing each other as fellow legislators both backed off, each motioning the other to proceed with the standard "after you, Alfonso" gestures. . . . As the two gestured, a small red sports car sidled between the two legislative vehicles, squirted into the once disputed parking space, squiggled to a halt and disgorged a pert blonde lass who with an engaging smile and a brief wave of a gloved hand left two open-mouthed lawmakers staring at each other (and the retreating figure).

April was the month of Emmys Oscars, Heebies and Jeebies. Fortunately no one in Monroe County had to sit nervously on their broadside to find out if he or she was picked for best actress, best actor, poorest singer, loudest talker or shiftest individual.

Why doesn't the Poconos have such a ceremony to take up our valuable time? It seems to be the custom across the country. And we wouldn't like to be different. Or would we?

Perhaps it would be a good idea to start an Itchy Award, one with a presentation to scratch away the desolate feelings that pile up throughout the year.

Maybe it would be allright to offer a trophy for the man who oversleeps and reports to work late every morning. Or honors could be bestowed on the woman who invades local stores with $50 in her pocket-book and returns home with the same half hundred.

While we are at it, why not laurels for the boy who eats everything put before him. Possibly, a token of esteem could be available to the girl who obeys her parents every awake hour of the day.

Nonsense, you bet. But they are no more foolish than those "I never expected it" events in which the recipient proceeds to language off. My mother thanks you, my sister thanks you, my father thanks you, and I thank you" speeches.

Corn is identified with Nebraska. But you would never know it when a group of overly dressed, always kissing addresses get together for the top performances of their careers.

The television industry is always searching for ways to better their field. One definite way would be to get rid of those farce awards presentation programs that every year become so pathetic that even the winners don't show up for their "honors."

We've always pictured the Oscars and Emmys winners in the same category as Frankenstein's monster—it was hand made and destroyed. So be it.

Try and Stop Me

Once after Lord Moynihan, a great British surgeon, had brought to a successful conclusion a very difficult operation before a gallery full of visiting doctors, he was asked how he could function so smoothly with such a crowd in attendance. He answered, "You see, there are just three people in the operating room when I operate: the patient and myself."

"But that's only two," noted the questioner. "Who is the third?" "The third," said Lord Moynihan, "is God."

Proxmire's Dinner

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — Senator William Proxmire is asking a new dimension to his favorite oratorical topic—"fiscal responsibility."

He is promoting a $25-a-plate fund-raising dinner in his own behalf.

Last week this column disclosed that the highest-paid employe on the senatorial payroll of the Wisconsin liberal Democrat was a full-time graduate student at the University of Wisconsin. Frank J. Campenni, 33, was getting $14,586 as "legislative assistant," although he does not live in Washington and hadn't done a lick of work in Proxmire's office.

This column pointed out that this curious situation was in striking contrast to a pet role of Proxmire—of declaiming often and at length about economizing, fiscal responsibility (a favorite expression) and the need to balance the federal budget.

When Proxmire got wind of this column's interest in his high-salaried absentee employe, he suddenly issued a three-page statement announcing he was repaying the government upwards of $9,000—the salary plus interest Campenni had received since Proxmire put him on his payroll last August. The Senator solemnly explained he was doing this wholly on his own initiative, and that Campenni would come to Washington in June to head his office staff.

Several days later Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, Mont., who also faces a tough re-election struggle next year, warmly lauded Proxmire for his high sense of public responsibility. Mansfield carefully said nothing about Proxmire having had this high-paid absentee employe on his payroll for eight months and acting only when he learned this was to be paid.

The $25-a-plate dinner Proxmire is now busily organizing is avowedly to raise funds for his re-election campaign next year. Proxmire's unannounced goal is $25,000.

The affair is to be a buffet, June 25, in one of Washington's new hotels that seems to specialize in fund-raising events. No speakers have yet been selected, and other important arrangements are still up in the air.

Proxmire has encountered some difficulty in putting together an imposing list of "sponsors." At least several prominent Democrats turned him down.

Profitable Shindig—Proxmire's fund-raising dinner is the latest to be launched.

It will be the last if Senator Warren Magnuson, Wash., chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee, has his way. He wants to concentrate all fund-raising in his committee, and is urgently appealing to other Democratic senators up for election to support his plan.

In return, Magnuson is offering them $5,000 each this year and at least $10,000 next year. How far he will get with that remains to be seen.

So far, individual fund-raising dinners have been far more productive.

One for Senator Howard Cannon, D-Nev., in Las Vegas, raised $100,000 for his 1964 reelection. This was a $100-a-plate affair attended by more than 1,000. A special plane with some 70 Washington notables flew to the famed resort city for the occasion. From their related accounts, a "wonderful time" was had by all.

Another dinner for Senator Vance Hartke, Ind., in Washington, netted more than $40,000. The charge was $50-a-plate, and close to 1,000 tickets were sold.

Next Monday a $100-a-plate dinner for Senator Frank Moss, Utah, Former President Truman has contributed $25, the only senatorial fund to which he has contributed. Truman, Vice President Lyndon Johnson and Senator Clinton Anderson, N.M., are honorary chairmen of Moss' affair. Anderson will act as master of ceremonies.

President Kennedy will be the big attraction at $1,000-a-plate dinners in New York on May 23 and in Los Angeles on June 20.

Similar affairs also are contemplated in Chicago, Boston and Dallas. No dates have yet been set for them, but they will take place this year, probably in the fall. Funds from these events will go to the Democratic National Committee.

More than $1 million was netted last winter at a combined $1,000-a-plate dinner and $100-a-plate gala to celebrate the second anniversary of the Kennedy administration.

Speaking Of Your Health:

Veterinarians Save Humans, Too

A recent scare regarding contamination in cans of tuna fish drew attention across the nation to a rare disease called "botulism."

If the word botulism is unfamiliar to you it is because of the outstanding work of Dr. Karl Meyer, a veterinarian of San Francisco. He developed an exact technique for destroying the spores responsible for botulism, a form of food poisoning. The preservation of food by canning owes its safety directly to the research endeavors of Dr. Meyer.

Important Contribution—Veterinarians, in their exhaustive animal research, have for years actively contributed to the health of man. As a result of the control of tuberculosis and brucellosis in cows, countless human lives have been saved.

The anti-coagulant being so extensively used now in heart disease was found in sweet clover by a Canadian veterinarian. The American Veterinary Medical Association, through its carefully supervised scientific investigations, have been important contributors to the knowledge of the origin and treatment of diseases of man.

CHILDREN IN HOSPITALS

The emotional disturbance of sick children is substantially reduced when parents are permitted unlimited visiting hours in private rooms, semi-private rooms and in wards. More and more hospitals all over the country are liberalizing visiting hours in the light of our newer understanding of children's psychological needs.

When children are left "alone" in a hospital without adequate explanation of why they are there and when they will be coming home to their family and security, they actually have the feeling of being rejected and abandoned by their parents. Sometimes the emotional after-effects of these feelings stay with them for years.

Reassure Them—Therefore parents of very young children should spend as much time as possible with them at the hospital. If it's cannot be arranged because of rigid hospital rules, then remember to leave some familiar object with the child. The sight of Mother's pocketbook or even gives comfort to the child and the needed reassurance that his parent will return.

Hospitals are discovering in this time of nursing shortage, that liberalizing visiting hours serves an additional purpose. The presence of the parent reduces to a minimum the need for nursing care. More important, of course, is the emotional support so necessary to the child's rapid recovery.

VACCINE FOR LEPROSY

Leprosy is still an important disease that affects the lives of thousands of people all over the world. Rapid travel and communication between all countries mean that diseases like leprosy can no longer be considered an isolated illness of any one area. Until recently, leprosy resisted many scientific studies, but now the bacillus or germ that causes it has been successfully grown in experimental animals and in incubators.

Now, for the first time, a vaccine against leprosy is possible. And so another disease of man will before long take its place in the past history of incurable diseases.

It started when I was trying to get my first one to drink milk out of a glass, and when he saw his little sister drinking from a bottle, he carried on until I gave him one, too. The same thing happened to all the others. The two older one hide their bottles when company come because they are ashamed, so maybe they will give it up soon. All my friends say I am wrong, but I don't see any harm in it, do you? What do the doctors say about this now? My sister took the bottles away from her children when they were a year old, and now they all suck their thumbs.

Age Of The Switcheroo

By John Chamberlain

Said Topsy to Turvy, "I don't get the bang of things these days. Here's our President, who has presumably studied logic at Harvard. The other day in his press conference he said that we had done pretty much all we could to 'demonstrate our hostility to the concept of a Soviet satellite in the Caribbean.'"

When I went to school a concept was something that was in your mind. Is Fidel Castro that? Is it just a concept that flew the other day from Havana to Marmansk and Moscow?

"My dear Topsy," said Turvy, "you don't get the idea. Everything today goes by opposites. It's the age of the switcheroo. It goes way beyond politics."

Why, when I was growing up, there were a lot of articles of faith. Spinach was good for children. Too much calcium in the body caused arthritis. Lazy Borden was guilty of chopping up her mother and father. Sacco and Vanzetti were innocent. Sam Insull, the big electrical utilities tycoon of Chicago who went broke in the depression from over-inflating his assets, was a benighted representative of the 'old order.'

But now the doctors tell the mothers that spinach is too much acid for young bodies and that a quart of milk a day is just the thing for old people with rheumatism.

The book writers are now proving that the original juries were right in declaring Lizzy Borden innocent and Sacco and Vanzetti guilty. And a professor at Brown University has just made Sam Insull the hero of a biography. Who knows, maybe the switcheroo verdicts are right.

"You're going too fast for me," said Topsy, "let's stick to politics for a while. There's this business in Laos, for instance. A couple of years ago old Ave Harriman advised that we set up a coalition government in Laos, with a Communist left, a neutralist center and a pro-Western right."

"Well, we did it. The left's territory in Laos is, of course, contiguous to Red China and Red North Vietnam—and in these parts of the world it is China's Mao Tse-tung who calls the tune. Now everyone knows that the Red Chinese do what they please these days without asking a by-your-leave from Khrushchev."

"So what do we do to preserve the peace in Laos? We send Ave Harriman to Moscow to ask Khrushchev to call off Mao Tse-tung's dogs in that drive toward southeast Asia's rice bowl. Isn't this like asking the manager of the Houston Colts to win a couple of games for Casey Stengel's Mets?"

"Well, what would you have our State Department do," asked Turvy, "send Averill Harriman to Albania?"

"Why not," said Topsy, "he might be able to get through to Mao from there. There's evidently a hot wire between Albania and Peiping."

"It's what is said over the wire that counts," said Turvy pontifically.

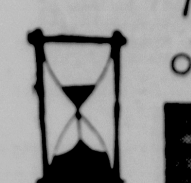

"Well, it's pretty clear that I'm not going to get anywhere trying to apply logic to foreign affairs," said Topsy. "But what about Congress? Here we send our representatives to Washington to legislate, and they respond by passing just two new laws in three months. I'm sure. Shouldn't we do something about our lazy Congressmen?"

"You shouldn't blame Congress," said Turvy. "You should blame the switcheroo. Haven't you heard that in this day and age it's the duty of the White House to do the legislating? Instead of Henry Clay and Daniel Webster proposing our laws today, we have Dr. Heller and Professor Schlesinger. They have decided that the people want tax reform and federal aid to education and a lot of things like that."

"I hadn't heard that the people elected Heller and Schlesinger," said Topsy.

"Precisely," said Turvy. "It's only some very small minorities that really want the laws that the legislators in the White House propose. So what does Congress do? It simply invokes the switcheroo and sets itself up as the governing body that exercises the veto. This used to be the President's prerogative, but, as I said at the beginning, everything goes by opposites these days."

"If you aren't careful," said Topsy, "you'll have me carry-

Outside Burning Ban Gets Support Of Local Residents

By Jim Shafer
Daily Record Reporter

"THANK goodness," was the general cry among residents of the Stroudsburg when the outside burning of paper ban was lifted Tuesday by the borough's fire chiefs.

Despite the heavy pileup of fire material, most residents felt the restriction was made to order for the dry spell which covered the Pocono Mountains the past month.

Only one individual of the 10 contacted by The Daily Record opposed the move by East Stroudsburg's fire chief, Herman Meinhardt and Stroudsburg's fire chief, Nelson Lightner. On April 22 the two fire officials banned all outside burning. All 10, however, were glad that the ban was lifted.

"The lone dissenter was Floyd Bachman, 49 Broad St., Stroudsburg. He said, 'We don't collect much paper so we were not really affected by the move. However, I am against the move. If a person has a good incinerator and is careful I see no reason for the ban to be placed. But then everyone doesn't have a good place to burn papers.'"

Mrs. Thomas Shiffer of 308 Brown St., Stroudsburg, commented, "There wasn't much a person could do but pile the stuff up and wait until the ban was lifted. That's what was done in our home. I also feel that the fire chiefs were in imposing the ban. They should take the same action again if conditions get to the point where fire becomes a great danger to our community."

Mrs. Lloyd E. Bentzoni, of 733 Ann St., Stroudsburg, said, "The ban really didn't affect me as I have no place to burn paper anyway, but I do think it wise on the part of the fire chiefs to place a restriction on burning. If we need it again then they should act again."

For Salvation Army

In East Stroudsburg, Maynard Lee, of 179 King St., replied, "Here in our house we have been saving the paper for the Salvation Army. It has been tied in bundles and will be delivered to them the first chance I get. The action taken by the two chiefs was a wise move and I hope that if conditions again reach a point where life and property is in danger the same restriction is imposed."

Mrs. Robert Shaw, of 517 Scott St., Stroudsburg, said, "I have never burned paper here. It has always been placed in the trash can and removed by the trashmen. I feel that burning within any town is dirty and the action taken by the local firemen was a wise move."

Mrs. William Tarr, of 329 Thomas St., Stroudsburg, noted, "I am very much in favor of the ban. We can only guess at the number of fires that were prevented by the ban. Here at our home the papers have been finding their way to the garbage can and we think that it has been very nice of the garbage man to pick them up and not say a word. It must have created a problem for him."

Anthony Bartleson, of 22 Elm St., East Stroudsburg, answered the telephone at his house and said, "I guess our home has been like the others in the area. We have stored the papers where we have had room. I think that the fire chiefs should have acted before on this matter. But I also think they should inform the people of any danger in a fire resulting from spontaneous combustion."

Mrs. Jack Wyckoff, of 100 Berwick Heights Rd., East Stroudsburg, said, "I hate to see it collect but there was nothing I could do but wait until the ban was lifted. When my husband told me the ban had been lifted I stood outside in the rain Wednesday and burned most of the paper."

Burned In Rain

Mrs. Ben Grudis, Jr., of 109 Broad St., East Stroudsburg, declared, "There are six of us in this house and papers sure have accumulated. Some we have placed in the garbage, others are still here. Yesterday I stood in the rain to burn some and today the pile is much smaller."

Mrs. Frank Belli, of 601 Queen St., Stroudsburg, said, "I have placed all the paper in the garbage can so the ban has not created any problem in this household. If the ban prevented loss of life and property then the move was more than justified."

Power Company Hit By Strike

GREENSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Some 1,300 service and production workers struck West Penn Power Co. yesterday after termination of their contract.

Supervisory personnel continued operations of the firm which serves 225,000 customers in 18 counties.

The company said negotiations bogged down over a union demand for joint determination in areas which are the responsibility of management, adding that wages apparently was not a major issue.

Local 102 of the Utility Workers Union of America, AFL-CIO, which represents the strikers, reportedly demanded that West Penn recognize the local as bargaining agent for certain other employees.

The company said it offered an 18-cent an hour wage increase over a three-year period along with improved vacation provisions and other fringe benefits. Present wage scales were not given.

The old two-year contract expired at midnight Tuesday. Picket lines were put up outside offices.

Another bargaining session was scheduled for Friday.

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

"Onward Christian Soldiers" is a tune it's easy to keep in step with but to a casual observer it must often seem that every little squad is marching off in a different direction. It's difficult to see just where the flood of base sales, bazaars, white elephant sales, penny suppers, fashion shows and hat socials is coming out.

However, in the spring, perhaps fashioning their pattern on the freshets that join rills that join creeks, church groups do seem to sort of flow together to a certain extent before they dry up almost completely for the summer.

Today, the United Council of Church Women has its May Fellowship Day; on Sunday the Monroe Pike Deaconry of Catholic Women get together; on Monday it's the Lutheran Women of the county; and on Tuesday the Presbyterian Women have their day. The Methodists have had a couple of joint meetings, and the United Church of Christ is in the process of converting its Guilds into Lay Councils.

These are all good, in that the underlying purpose of all the little circles, aids societies, auxiliaries, guilds and associations is reaching out to a common goal.

But the problem about bringing people into a big organization is that immediately, it has to be divided into small divisions, commissions, subcommittees, committees, secretaries and such, in order to get things done.

Which in turn results in such a proliferation of titles that it's hard for the laymen to get down to what the person under those titles really does.

From the looks of her picture, Miss Margaret E. Kuhn looks as if she would be able to tell us today just what work she does as a member of the Department of the Urban Church and the Department of Social Welfare of the National Council of Churches and as chairman of the Christian Social Relations Committee of the General Department of United Church Women.

Split-Level Living Means Economy First In House Of The Week

Construction Is Basic, Economical

By Jules Loh

SPLIT-LEVEL living has become a shibboleth of the affluent suburban society. Actually the symbolism is way off base.

The fact is split-level construction is an economy measure. Its dramatic departure from tired architectural tradition has an esthetic appeal which surely has influenced its popularity, but the main reason for the staggered design is to give the owner more house for the money.

This is how it works.

Cork Is Ideal For Flooring

CORK — one of the world's oldest natural materials is being used more and more to give rooms a new, warm look and graciousness with cork wall and floor tiles.

The material with which these modern effects are created has been in use for over 3,000 years. Because of its buoyancy, resilience and durability, ancient Greeks and Romans used the bark of the cork oak for floats in fishing nets, to make sandals, and as stoppers for jugs.

Early monasteries had cork lined walls and ceilings to protect the monks from intense heat. Families in the cork-producing areas of the Western Mediterranean have for centuries used cork slabs for floors and roofs.

Take a one-story house with a basement; saw it in half as you would a stick of cord wood; raise one of the halves so that what used to be the basement becomes above-ground living area.

Result: added living space at low additional cost because the over-all perimeter, the roof area, remains substantially the same.

In today's House of the Week this bonus area contains the main entrance foyer, a large recreation room, lavatory and garage. An interior garage such as this is an added economy — not only is it under the same roof but it allows the house to be built on a smaller lot than would be possible with an attached garage.

The designer of this house, incidentally, is the man credited with designing the first split-level tract homes back in 1948, architect Herman H. York. And this shows the result of 15 years of refining the split-level technique.

The first and second levels contain 913 square feet of living area; the bedroom level has 618 square feet for a total of 1,531. The garage and storage space add another 245 square feet. Over-all dimensions are a modest 42 feet wide by 34 feet nine inches deep. That means this house could have more than 15 feet clearance on each side and still fit on a 75-foot lot.

Additional Details

A covered entry is an important asset to any home and this house has a particularly spacious one. The overhanging roof is supported by crisp wrought iron panels making a nice setting for the double-door entry. This is the focal point of the entire exterior and if any accent color is used architect York suggests you use it on the doors — but definitely not the garage doors.

The flagstone of the porch extends into the foyer, a practical as well as a handsome measure. There's a generous coat closet in the foyer, out of the way of the swing of the front door.

The living room is particularly glamorous, with a wrought iron

BALANCED SPLIT-LEVEL: The long, low cube of the living room wing, anchored by the chimney, provides excellent balance for the two-story portion of this handsome three-bedroom home. The main entry is covered, with double doors leading to the foyer. Traditional styling features wood shingles and brick.

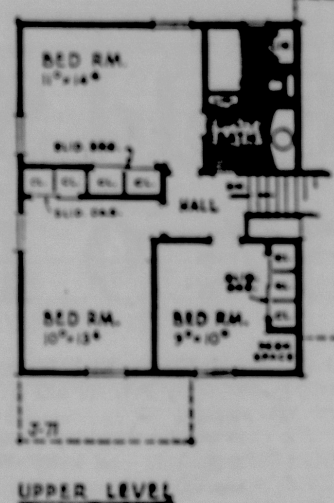

balcony rail at the four-step stairs, a 20-pane bow window in front and a fireplace on the long wall which sweeps into the dining room ell.

The informal area is particularly well laid out. From the kitchen sink there is excellent observation of both outdoor and indoor family recreation areas. The kitchen is plenty large, 10 feet by 13 feet four inches, so there's enough room for a breakfast table which doesn't encroach on the work or traffic areas. Also, there is an abundance of counter space.

Down four steps and on the same level as the foyer is the spacious recreation room; and well placed for both living room and kitchen use is the lavatory. A fireplace on the far wall of the recreation room, visible from the kitchen, would be a nice addition and is included as an optional feature. Sliding glass doors lead to the rear terrace.

From the garage it's possible to go either to the living room, or straight back to the kitchen without passing through the formal area. The single car garage has plenty of extra space for bicycles and storage.

Upstairs, there is a minimum of hall space and all three bedrooms are well proportioned. The main bathroom is divided with an interior door, and an extra door leads from the front portion to the master bedroom. Architect York suggests carpeting the front section of the bath — an impressive touch.

J-T Statistics

A side-to-side split level with three bedrooms, one and one half baths. Lower levels contain 913 square feet, upper level 618 square feet for total of 1,531 square feet of habitable area not counting 245 square foot garage and garage storage area. Overall dimensions are 42 feet wide by 34 feet nine inches deep.

FLOOR PLANS: The levels are split unevenly in this house, with only four steps between the first and second levels and eight between the second and third. Note the split bath upstairs, with the extra door from the master bedroom. Total habitable area is 1,531 square feet.

New Booklet Simplifies Paneling With Plywood

ONCE upon a time, there were many home improvement jobs that required real carpentry skill and specialized experience. When manufacturers of plywood and publishers of directional material joined forces, simplified instructions were produced that took all the fear, mystery and up to two thirds the cost out of paneling with plywood.

If you have long admired handsome wood paneled rooms, and hoped one day to be able to afford same, your day has arrived. By following the step by step directions outlined in the book offered below, you'll be able to panel walls like magic.

Factory pre-finished plywood panels can be applied over cracked plaster, plasterboard, paint, wallpaper, concrete blocks or to studs in new construction. They can be nailed, glued or fastened in place with matching metal moldings surfaced with wood veneer. The high lustrous finish provides a rich background for furniture, draperies and other prized possessions.

Realizing few people know how to apply paneling, the book provides all the information needed to cover every type of installation from modernizing a basement or attic, hall, living or bedroom. Over fifty illustrations take the mystery out of each step.

QUESTION: In making a flagstone patio floor soon, I will find it necessary to cut some of the flagstones. Because of the particular kind of layout I plan, about 15 flagstones will have to be cut straight across to give them an even edge. Can you tell me how to handle this?

ANSWER: The secret of cutting flagstone is to use a lot of light blows rather than a few heavy ones. Make a second line along the face of the flagstone where you want the cut to be. The scoring is done by running a cold chisel along a straight-edge.

Nick each edge of the scored line to a depth of about one-eighth of an inch, then nick each edge of the other side of the flagstone. The two nicked edges then meet. Now score the other side of the flagstone with the chisel, holding the straightedge directly over the previous scored line.

Place the stone on the ground and deepen one scored line to about one-eighth of an inch, then do the same with the other scored line. Do this by holding the chisel in the crack and hitting it with gentle taps of a hammer. You now have made a groove running all around the flagstone.

Place the chisel in the center of the groove on one side of the stone and keep hitting it gently with the hammer, working toward the edges. The stone suddenly will split cleanly.

THE AREA in crops in the Soviet Union — 500,000,000 acres — is about the same as in the United States and Canada combined but production is about three-fourths that of the United States.

Ideas For Installing Swimming Pool At Home

MANY homeowners are now seriously planning to install a swimming pool or to finish the swimming pool to add comfort to the family's way of living. Such improvements mean better living, yet they may add thousands of dollars to the value of the home.

Increasing the value of a home can be done not only in cities where there is a ready market available for resale, but also on farms, in small towns and other rural areas. A purchaser almost always is willing to pay for added living comforts that are offered to him.

A swimming pool may be a profitable investment in many instances, for it may make a home worth hundreds of dollars more than the cost of the pool to assure profit for the far-sighted owner.

A swimming pool has an added value in that it can be used for fire protection simply by keeping a water pump near-by for immediate use if needed. An LP-gas pump is excellent for such emergency because it can't be put out of action by fire which may burn incoming power lines.

Decorate Home Bathroom

INTERIOR decorators report that "glamor" bathrooms can now be included in remodeled homes because modern building materials and techniques enable contractors to deliver more value for the buyer's dollar. Decorators point out that only a few tasteful accessories are needed to complete a bathroom that has been designed for both style and service.

Leading designers are constantly introducing distinctive marble patterns, and even handsome woodgrains, into bathroom decor. These same decorative themes can be incorporated into almost any home plan by using "Marlite," a pre-colored hardboard paneling, available at lumber dealers in 10 "companion colors," seven wood grains and six marble patterns.

These panels, whose marble and woodgrain patterns are authentic reproductions of selected natural materials, provide a "permanent decor" because they never need refinishing. Their plastic-finish smooth surface resists moisture.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCIS DRAKE

Friday, May 3, 1963

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — "Out of the frying pan into the fire" could fit your situation now. Just don't panic, or let discouraged feelings take hold. Remember, most great accomplishments come through hardships.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — Closest plans and a computer, realistic format. Synchronize your work with a realistic, realistic routine and carefully outlined projects. Take all with ease and a distinct, unshakable manner.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) — The third of a trio of fine days. Here you look at the stars and will continue to do so. Planet Mercury heightens imagination, encourages your own talents, and capitalizes on your talents.

June 22 to July 21 (Cancer) — Rewards, service, and action. Rewards of like quality. When the immediate rewards of the stars are kept looking for the sunshine back of the clouds, IT IS THERE.

July 22 to August 21 (Leo) — A willingness to cooperate with the right sources and increase your work load will be a success. But take each matter in turn — and not too vigorously.

August 22 to September 21 (Virgo) — You may run up against modern business men. Take the attitude of a victor. You are a winner. Keep looking for the sunshine back of the clouds. IT IS THERE.

September 22 to October 21 (Libra) — You are the investigator of, and momentum for, fresh, healthy activity, a better trend, reorganization to improve methods — both your own and those of others.

October 22 to November 21 (Scorpio) — Avoid going too far out on "limbs" and always be prepared to a standstill a well-run or, in other words, a well-run strengths which may be latent.

November 22 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — Joy in improving and enhancing any worth while project, methods. Just don't take sides before you know WHY. Good, solid learned sources.

December 22 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Do not let problems or discussions grow out of proportion. Hold yourself in check if dealing with children, elders, cooperative interests.

January 22 to February 21 (Aquarius) — A fairly productive period, waiting for you to inject the right, improved ingredients to increase potential. Use the investigative approach. Work with facts.

February 22 to March 21 (Pisces) — Recognize primary needs. Go about duties before thinking about work and interests, except where appropriate. Consider the wise moves of the past, they could insure future security.

YOU BORN TODAY bring light and warmth into any room in which you enter — also enthusiasm, realism, and fantasy. You are eager for friendships, will work seriously for your credits, which, if you are developing your assets on the higher plane, will be numerous and outstanding. Taurus love their families, but can fight with them. Constancy of affection. Keep outside interests from interfering with domesticity. Taurus should rule, but once "fed up" with pressures or inadequacy, revolt quickly and fully. For safety's sake, arbitrate — it may prevent a needless rift. Do not overstep one day's plan, another to extreme. You become able teachers, versatile actors, musicians, writers. Sometimes critics. You are always thinking rarely unskilled, but may "shoot off" unexpectedly.

Ford Reports Record Sales

Detroit (AP)—Ford Division of Ford Motor Co. said Thursday its selling rate of 6,008 new cars daily in April was the highest ever.

General Manager Lee A. Iacocca said the previous record was 5,964 daily last November. Total sales of 156,196 were up 12,300 cars from April, 1962.

Iacocca said combined car and truck sales for the first four months of the year were a record 638,490 compared with 630,796 in 1962.

The Daily Investor

Commission On Sales

By William A. Doyle

Q. My broker, who is with a well-known brokerage house, telephoned and offered to sell me some stock in a big company — without any commission charge to me. He said that the person selling the stock needed the money for tax purposes.

If this is true, why couldn't the broker sell the stock on the stock exchange and still get his commission?

A. Don't worry about your broker. He made money on the deal. Even though you don't say so and perhaps your broker didn't tell you (although he should have) it's pretty obvious that the stock involved was being offered either through a "secondary distribution," an "exchange distribution" or a "special distribution."

Those are three somewhat different methods of selling a large amount of stock, other than through the normal mechanics of stock market trading.

In these cases, the buyer normally does not pay any commission. But the broker gets his "spread" (in effect, his commission) from the seller.

Q. Maybe I'm the suspicious type. But it seems to me that my broker always tries harder to sell stock to me when he is handling it through something such as an initial offering of a new issue or a secondary distribution. Are my suspicions justified?

A. There's really no reason to be suspicious. Just be realistic. A broker makes more money (his "spread" or "concession") on such things as an initial offering, secondary, exchange or special distribution than he does in commissions on a simple buy or sell order in normal stock market trading.

Q. I own a certificate for 62 shares of stock of a big company which I purchased through an employee stock purchase plan while employed by that company. How would I go about breaking this one certificate into a number of different certificates, each for a smaller number of shares, in case I want to sell, say, one share, ten shares or 20 shares?

A. There's no need to do that. If you sell any of those shares, you deliver the one certificate you now own to the broker through whom you sell. And, after the necessary details are taken care of, you will receive a certificate representing the number of shares you have not sold.

Through all this, you will continue to be the owner of the shares you have not sold.

However, if you insist on doing what you inquire about, you can have it taken care of by the transfer agent for that stock. If you like, you can turn in that one 62-share certificate and receive 62 one-share certificates.

Frankly, that's not advisable. It would be an awful bother taking care of all those stock certificates.

Q. Because of its high market price of late, I have been debating whether to sell my American Telephone & Telegraph stock and put the money in a savings account, where I can get a higher yield. But I have heard rumors that the AT&T dividend will be increased. What do you think about this?

A. The dividends on AT&T stock have been raised twice within the past four years. Based on the company's steadily increasing earnings, it's logical to expect that dividends will be hiked again, sometime in the future. But I won't try to predict when.
